10 Colorado Real Weddings

The Ultimate Wedding Guide To:
Denver, Boulder, Fort Collins, Colorado Springs

Spring/Summer 2016

$4.99 Display Until May 16, 2016
Josie & Kow

engaged about a year

photography by James Christensen Photographers at Aspen Mountain Club

Their Story

Bride Josie Ahwood, 34, a director of print research and development at Ralph Lauren.
Groom Kow Allo-Munmal, 33, an executive director at Morgan Stanley.

How They Met: At a Going Away brunch for a mutual friend. WEDDING STYLE: To Accentuate the beauty of their Mountain setting, the couple decided on a sleek black, white and silver color palette. —CH

Guests took the three-mile gondola ride to the top of snow-covered Aspen Mountain for Josie and Kow's high-altitude, High-fashion nuptials. A black-tie dress code meant guests looked just as incredible as the mountain backdrop. "Each groomsman wore self-tie bow ties, which made for an incredible idea in the dressing room," Kow recalls.
The couple’s classic, all-white wedding cake was finished with buttercream frosting and a single cascade of orchids. Once the sight came to a close, the newlyweds made their post-wedding getaway down the mountain in a private gondola with the sound of eagles in the background.

Josie and Row married in front of a fireplace flanked by white branches, candles, and arrangements of orchids and baby’s breath. As for the cancer-ravaged wedding dress, Josie enlisted the help of a coworker to design it for her after she was unable to find what she was looking for. “My checklist was small... I wanted lace, a high neck, long sleeves and an open back.” Josie says of her dream gown. “There’s nothing better than wearing a dress on your wedding day created specifically for you.”